MODE : ZOOM

Some remarkable words from facilitators:

We always need to think and try to search for positive parts even the situation is not good. Always motivate yourself that I am strong and I can change threat into strength. Keep your mind busy by doing various creative activities. He also shared the youth focus program which are planned by NYC in the program.

Mr. Madhab Prasad Dhungel, Vice president of Nepal Youth Council

If we want to be successful entrepreneurs can start from small, never think that we have to have big investment for business. Whenever you start a business always think that 6 months is a trial period of your business. Never think about profit in beginning. He suggested that there are lots of opportunity in online business even in this pandemic situation.

Mr. Amrit Khadka, General Secretary of Federation of Nepalese Chambers of Commerce and Industry (FNCCI), Youth Council and youth entrepreneur.

The world is dealing with the impact of COVID-19. We have an opportunity and also responsibility to take measures that will ensure that our children and youth can thrive today and tomorrow. This is a crisis moment to consider how we can build a better future for our children and youth. A new ILO study has just emerged indicating that more than one in six young people have stopped working since the first phase of pandemic due to COVID-19. So, there's a fear of damaging the future and also knowledge and skills of the youth. Loo Niva conducted youth motivational program on “Change threat into a strength during COVID-19”. The program targeted to the youth. Loo Niva conducted the program with the thought that Business is particular have a responsibility to mitigate the impact that this crisis is having on children and youth.
